A scanning electron micrograph (SEM) showing numerous yeast cells. The cells are roughly spherical and have a textured, slightly wrinkled surface. Many of the cells contain a bright green, circular nucleus. The cells are densely packed, with some showing budding or smaller cells attached to them. The background is dark, making the light-colored cells stand out.

bottom fermentation at cooler temps

Ales

When the yeast ferments at higher temperatures and stays at the surface, it produces an ale.

Super toasty yeast sits at the top

Popular ales include Pale Ale, Stout, Porter, Hefeweizen, Blonde, IPA, Belgian Ale, and Amber

Lagers

When it ferments at a lower temperature and does not float at the surface, it produces a lager.

Not-so-toasty yeast floats around

Popular lagers include Pilsner, Bock, Marzen, Helles, Doppelbok, and Dunkel.
